Women Empowerment Through Panchayati Raj Institutions

Dr. B. R. Katturwar.

Associate Professor & H.O.D

Public Administration

Degloor College, Degloor

Indian social system of ancient times had offered secondary place to the women. Their life was limited (Chul aani Mul) and restricted by the orthodox concepts, male dominated culture, traditional attitude. Women were educationally, politically and socially oppressed. They were deprived from their basic rights and needs. These women were treated inhumanly as on the part of so called Male community in Indian society. A lot of study has been done at International, National and State level regarding women empowerment. It is observed that many of the countries, including India there is a lot of space for women empowerment. Women are not treated equal to men in most part of world. It caused many problems created in the society. The existed inequality between Women and men creates disturbance in the development of India. Women empowerment will make a strong society and strong Democracy.

With the spread of education contemporary rural women understand their rights, their place in the society. The movement of women empowerment has been started in the 19th century Savitribai Phule and Jotiba Phule. After independence the Panchayati Raj Institutions has been established for rural development. Till 1993 the participation of women in Panchayat Raj institutions was meager. As per the 73rd constitutional amendment the provision has been made for the reserve seats for backward class men and women. In result of that this women leaders came into the main stream particularly women have got opportunities to lead in panchayat raj Institutions.

The reservation has brought greater and positive changes in the life of women and backward class women's. The women those who were not even used to attend public programmes like flag hoisting, inauguration functions, leading programmes etc. Due this amendment women started taking active participation in various public functions. They started serving through different streams. The high class people's approach towards woman leaders is positively changing. Women are getting respect at various stages. People are accepting women's leadership and it is creating favorable atmosphere towards social justice. Day by day the gap between high class community and backward class community is getting reduced.

The economic and familial condition of these backward women leaders is not much satisfactory even today. They are trying to overcome their problems and proving their best in duties. Due to the active participation and contribution in Panchayat Raj Institutions the various schemes for backward community are being implemented effectively. Social change is not an overnight job, it is a continuous process, slow but steady will march towards its ultimate aim. The strength of women is increased and the qualitative change is seen among women. There is a positive change in mentality of high class and backward community, both are trying to understand each other and maintaining good and healthy relationship. This is the achievement of 73rd constitutional amendment.

To make backward class women's role more effective in rural development the educated women should step forward. The women who have social attachment and social responsibility are expected to take active participation in Panchayat Raj institutions. It is also equally important that men's approach towards backward women also should be essentially changed. If we could do this then only the base of democracy and the nation will be strong enough and society will grow harmoniously.

The study was undertaken panchayati Raj Institutions and Women empowerment . It is so found that the socio-economic factor has been changed after participation of women in Panchayat Raj institutions. There are emerging issues that need to be addressed to make the role of women in the long run. We may conclude that the Rural development activities of Women leaders in panchayati Raj institutions are successful. In this way 73rd constitutional amendment is successful for empowerment of women through panchayati Raj Institutions.
